

CURRENT LITERATURE.

Marshall P. Wilder, raconteur and mirth-maker, weaves a bright garland from blossoms plucked in the gardens of humor and pathos and presents it in a volume bearing the appropriate title "The Sunny Side of the Street." Mr. Wilder's collection of anecdotes, witty sayings, humorous situations and pathetic incidents are many and as varied as human characteristics. People eminent in public life and in the professions as well as those in humbler station furnish abundant material for smiles and moving incidents. The author offers no apology for including in his collection some ancient stories, insisting that the antiquity of the jester's craft justifies the recital of an occasional antique. "A story," he exclaims, "is like a good food. It matters how familiar it is if you know how to serve it well." In this instance the service is good and the whole joyous feast may be had for the modest sum of $1.20. Published by Funk & Wagnall's company, New York.

"Black Butterflies," by Belthe St. Luz (P. H. Revell Co., New York), is one of those books which defy analysis or description simply from the fact that nothing is one of the most difficult words to define in other terms. It deals with an East Indian who would have been a philosopher had he not been something else and would have been a Thuggee priest had he not been what he was. It tries to tell of a class of English society which fortunately does not exist—except of books designed for American perusal. The best part of the book is its dedication, "To the Noble Order of Mystic Shriners," but it is probable that the order was helpless when the book was dedicated.

"For a Free Conscience," by L. C. Wood (P. H. Revell Co.), is a book that will repay reading. It deals with English Quaker life in the seventeenth century and aside from an absorbing story gives a vivid description of the plague in London and the great fire. The style is modern, "for that he thanks," the language good and the book one of the few that can be called sane as well as interesting.

In view of the time taken in her new novel, "Lords of the Soil," we are particularly interested to hear that the author, Mrs. Jocelyn, is the widow of the so-called "Martyr Missionary of the Black Hills," who in 1876 fell a victim to the Indians' hatred of the white man. In "Deadwood," S. D. Instead of letting this tragic experience prejudice her against the red men, Mrs. Jocelyn has championed the Indian cause in her novel, showing in vivid colors the gross injustice and rapacity of the early white settlers in their treatment of the magnanimous and unspoiled "Lords of the Soil." "Lords of the Soil" is soon to be published by the C. M. Clark Publishing company of Boston.

Thomas F. Millard, who is in the east for Scribner's Magazine, has been making a careful study of the conditions of the commerce and industries of Japan in view of the tremendous load put upon that country by its war expenses. In the September Scribner's the results will appear in an article on "The Financial Prospects of Japan," which has to do with the ways and means by which Japan must meet its obligations.

In the August number of the Quarterly Journal of Economics (published for Harvard university by George H. Ellis company, Boston), G. O. Virtue has an interesting article on the Co-operative Coopers of Minneapolis. This has been for nearly thirty years one of the most noted instances of co-operation in production among workmen, but its recent history is little known. Mr. Virtue tells the story to date—not a wholly encouraging story, but by no means a wholly discouraging one.

Housecleaning is not the pleasantest of the housekeeper's tasks, but none the less necessary on that account. In the September Dellatorre Isabel Gordon Curtis offers in her series, "The Making of a Housewife," some suggestions that will tend to lighten the labor and lessen the disagreeableness of this household duty. Other items of domestic interest in the same number are illustrated cookery and a variety of recipes under the topics "Delicious Green Jellies," "Peculiarly Colorful Salads," and "The Potato." In addition, Allen M. Kellogg explains "How to Select Finishing Hardware" and Ward MacLeod writes on "Growing Bulbs Indoors."

The Roosevelt family's strong hold upon the good will of the public has been strongly emphasized by the remarkable popularity of the portraits of "The President's Family" in the July McClure's, which went out a print a few days after issue, the circulation department being swamped with orders. The edition of the magazine was quickly exhausted and so persistent were demands for "the magazine containing the Roosevelt pictures" that several thousand extra copies were printed in the country, no matter what her religious creed. It is certainly one of the most stimulating utterances relating to the home sphere that have appeared in a long time.

Nebraska has begun asserting its claims to a literary output. There have been few books reviewed so widely with favor as Miss Willis Gilbert's "The Troll Garden" and Mrs. E. M. C. Meredith's "The Wing of Love," published by McClure, Phillips & Co. Both of these authors are known as Nebraskans, though the state can claim neither as a native product. Miss Carter is a child of the Siuslaw-dash valley. Mrs. Meredith was born in Detroit.

All who love nature will find in "Jim Crow Tales," by Burton Stoner, a wealth of field lore. It is not strictly a juvenile, but will please old and young alike. It charmingly depicts wild life, the narrow escapes and frolics of the denizens of forest and stream, not in connection with men and dogs, but with their fellow creatures. The stories are delightfully told in that each animal speaks for itself, telling its clever devices for outwitting its crafty neighbors, and of the practical jokes played upon each other. Of course, as far as animals talking is concerned, it is all fiction, but the ring true in their relation of how these little creatures plan, work and play in their wild homes. The book is handsomely illustrated by Carl H. Williams. Published by the Safford Publishing company.

The English publishers of "Rhymes of Real-Children" and "Babies in Toyland," issued in this country by Fox, Duffield & Co., announce second English editions of these successful juveniles.

WOLBACH COMES TO OMAHA

Grand Island Capitalist and Merchant Will Open Bank Here.

WILL MAKE THIS CITY HIS HOME

Wants to Spend His Remaining Days Where He and Family Can Enjoy Advantages of Metropolitan City.

Samuel Wolbach of Grand Island, one of the wealthiest and most prominent business men of that city, if not in the state, will move to Omaha and open a private bank. Mr. Wolbach is authority himself for this statement. On a recent visit to Omaha he said to a friend: "I have decided, after years of arduous application to business, the results of which have been most gratifying, to come to Omaha, where my family and I can enjoy the privileges and advantages of a large city. At the same time I will not entirely quit active business. My plan is to open a private banking house in Omaha. I have been looking around the city for a suitable location, but as yet have made no choice." Mr. Wolbach is well known in Omaha and in most parts of Nebraska. For two terms he served in the upper branch of the legislature some years ago. Besides his large mercantile interests at Grand Island he owns stores in Hastings and other good Nebraska towns. Mr. Wolbach will be established in Omaha as not certain, but he said it would be as soon as he could wind up some business matters now pending. The Wolbach dwelling in Grand Island is one of the most attractive spots in that hamlet. It is spacious, elegant and modern in every way. It is said the family has been loath to part with this beautiful place.

PROCEEDINGS OF CITY COUNCIL

Bids Asked for Paving on Additional Streets and Improvement Districts Created.

The city council held a brief adjourned meeting last night to pass ordinances creating improvement districts and ordering the advertisement for bids for paving on the following streets: Tenth from Lincoln avenue to Castellar; California from Twenty-sixth street to Central boulevard; Miami from Twenty-second to Twenty-fourth; Marcy from Thirtieth to Thirty-first; Thirtieth from Farnam to Dodge; and Thirtieth from Leavenworth to Jackson. The ordinance defining certain conditions that may constitute nuisances of lots and providing for proceedings to secure the drainage, filling and grading of them and the assessment of costs against the owners was passed.

Colorado At Her Best

In late summer Colorado is at her very best. The green of the verdure is slowly turning to crimson and gold.

Afar looms a majestic snow-capped peak, enshrouded in autumnal haze—before you stretches mile on mile of rolling plain.

The clear, cool air drifts down the canyons, freighted with scents of pine and fir trees.

Colorado is truly a good place to visit in Autumn.

Rock Island trains to Colorado carry standard and tourist sleepers, dining cars and free reclining chair cars, equipped with electric fans and electric lights.
